The road to Sturgis is a well-worn path followed by some tough, hardy people, some of whom ride hundreds of miles to attend this world-famous event now celebrating its 83rd year. Many bring their own tents for camping, or otherwise rough it all the way.

But some, especially as (father) time goes on and erodes their road-rattled bones and nervous systems, may seek respite from the noise, the dust and the rowdy atmosphere and still enjoy all Sturgis has to offer. The following guide will assist if you're looking for nice places to stay and eat.
